universal usetuiness

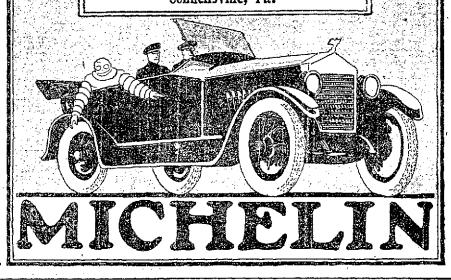

Nowadays many tire makers are urging motorists to use non-skids on rear wheels and smooth-treads or 'driving' tires on front wheels.

This is necessary because the sharp projections on some nonskids make steering cifficult. Not so with the Michelin Usiyersal. Its tread is so broad and flat, it steers as easily as a smooth tread.

Use Michelin . Universals all around. You will thus secure protection against the danger-ous front skid as well as against the rear skid; and at the same time you will avoid the necessity of carrying two kinds of spares.

Remember that Michelins are unsurpassed for durability though moderate in price.

"ACE OF THE SADDLE"—A big production, with Harry Carey in one of the best roles in his screen career, is being presented today.
"The Ace of the Saddle" is easontially a Carey picture. Of thrills there are plenty, of careful conscientious work by the star there is a volume. Tach member of the supporting cast is desarving of praise for the able manner in which he performs his part from the deep-dred "villain" to the cow-boy comedians who throttle any little moment that looked like it might wish to drag.

The story of "The Ace of the Saddle" was written by Frederick J. Jackson and was produced under the able and experienced guidance of Jack Ford, to whom should go a goodly por-tion of credit for the success of pre-vious Carey pictures. Peggy Pearce, he leading woman, makes an ador-the lettle foil for the star. Joe Harris, one of Carey's fast per-conal friends and associates in life "off screen," plays the part of the crooked sheriff of Yucca county who conspires against the life of the redoubtable he ro; and King Fisher (Ed) Jones, he of Ruffalo Bill Wild West fame, is seen ia a quaint serio-comic role of 'Home Sweet' Holmes, the ranch foreman. Miss Normand never has had a perter vehicle for her peculiar talents than in this story by Perley Pcore Shasan. She plays Elsie MacFarland in the "down-stairs" of a great, pula-tia! hotel; a slavey always anxious to get "upetairs," where the music and the laughter and the wine are. There is humor enough in her dealings with that individual and her attempts to play when she should be working. But the real humor of the piece is seen when she is providently lifted upwards by a bell-boy, who is a millionaire in disguise. In passing it may be noted that his sole reason for donning a role was to become acquainted with Elsie, whom he had seen peeking through a door-way,

A runaway heiress arrives at the hotel, and fearing that the detective would recognize her from her costume gives it to the "bell-boy" to have it "cleaned." He, however, induces Elsie to put it on and when she goes upstairs completes her tollette by abstracting a pair of shoes a ladv had delicately removed beneath a table Elsie replaces the shoes with table Elsie replaces the shoes with her cwn. There is considerable dif-ference between them and her brocans. When the detective spies the dress he naturally concludes she was the hairess (whose father has offered a $5,000 reward for her capture unmarried—she has eloped with a ras-cally chauffeur) and the fun begins which results in Elsie's exposing the adventurer, winning the reward, and incidentally a rich husband—the "bell

INEFFICIENCY IN GOVI ENGINEET BUSINESS.

In the furnishing of a (ar load of food for distribution at Connellsyile the public has so concrete in example ods of doing business that it can be easily understood why here have been such awful bungles n adminis-tering the allairs of the War Risk Insurance and Vocational Education

Over a month has elapsed since the order was placed for the shipment of a car of food to Connellsville and although about half of the quantity ordered has been received i cannot be distributed to intending purchasers until an invoice covering the ship-ment and giving the prices of the sev-eral articles has been received. After shipment was made the car became lost or sidetracked in trinsit and a week or more was consumed in tracing and causing it to be forwarded All the while the local committee in charge has been waiting for the invoice which in case shipment had been made by people accustomed to doing business in a business-like way. would have been mailed the same day the shipment was way-billed But such expeditions methods are un-known in the Washing on depart ments Moreover it seems not to have occurred to persons in ch. rge of making the shipment that by . ending only half the order the freight charges would be practically double what they would have been on a single car shipment.

the government price of the goods, hence the purchasers will be called upon to pay this needless expense. No upon to pay this needless expense. No information is available at to the time the remainder of the order will be hipped. If it requires a much time as has taken the partial shipment to grive, and similar delay in the forwarding of the invoice occurs, the people of Connellsville will be fortunate if they are able to make their second purchase of government food by Christmas

If such service were rendered by private parties who are engaged in supplying the food needs of the people they would be the recipions of bitter criticism and suffer the loss of patronage as well and deservedly so Apparently mefficiency is expected in governmental agencies or is con- And each of us in arrious ways doned for the people seen to be will- Strives to de eve another's praise ing to -t d for mote of it than they would in d sang with individuals of private (Lierprises

the Democrats have taught the nation, and which could not otherwise, or by any other party or means have been so clearly and so/convincingly demonstarted, the present and future genera-tions will never cease to give thanks

It is well the people did not know some of the facts about the methods of conducting some of the war related enterprises in Washington when they were asked to buy Liberty Bonds to help win the war. With the know ledge for instance, that it takes 1850 salarated employes in the Vocational Education board to train 323 disabled colders or about two employes to a solder there might have been doubting Thomases here and there who would have hesitated about assisting to maintain so many non-combutants in bomb-proof jobs

With his usual evasiveness President Wilson in quoting Colonel Receave and Senator Lodge was careful to re-frain from noting that they referred to a real league of nations not to the League of Notions

With the retail prices of 22 articles of food increasing one per cent in August as compared with July and thereby reaching the highest on record it would appear that the H C L cam paign is running on the reverse gear

Who is going to volunteer to get the half car of government food sent to Connelieville out of the trenches of red tape by Christmas?

These may seem to be rather broad claims, but I can prove them to your satisfaction any day you will call in and see me.

For the fact is that my woolens come from Detmer, and Detmer on woolens means what sterling means on silver—absolutely pure all wool, guaranteed. My new samples are just in and they represent the finest that the biggest woolen house in the world has ever produced. You couldn't buy better, no matter how much you paid; but you can buy these at prices that will surprise and pleake you Just come in and look them over anyhow. Better come carly while the selection is still complete. Some of the patterns may be gone if you wait too long.

But would she ever proclaim her right to freedom? If she was indeed Eloise Beauchire—and even as to this I was not as yet wholly convinced— she had deliberately assumed to be Rene, doing so for a specific purpose—that object being to afford the other an opportunity for escape. Why, she had not so much as trusted me. From the very beginning she bad encouraged me in the belief that she was a negress, never once arousing the faintest suspicion in my mind. Nothing, then, I was convinced, short of death or disgrace, could ever compel her to confess the truth yet. Kirby might sus-pect, might fear, but he had surely never learned who she was from her lips—that she was Eloise Beaucaire.

The conviction that this young wor an was white, educated, refined, the daughter of good blood—no fleeting ne-gress, cursed with the black strain of an allen race, a nameless slave— brought to me a sudden joy in discovery I made no attempt to conceal. "Eloise Beaucaire, Eloise Beaucaire" —the name repeated itself on my lips, as though it were a refrain. I knew instantly what it all meant—that some divine, mysterious hand had led from the very hour of my leaving Fort Armstrong, and would continue to lead until the will of God was done. It was not in the stars of Fate that such yilliamy should succeed; such sacrifice as hers fail of its reward.

Nevertheless, in spite of this re-solve, and the fresh courage which had been awakened within me by the faith that from now on I battled for the love of Eioise Beaucaire, no immediate op-portunity for service came. I could only wait patiently, and observe.

I was convinced that Kirby, what-ever might be his ultimate purpose regarding the girl, had no present in-tention of doing her further injury. He contemplated no immediate attempt at forcible possession, and would be well satisfied if he could only continue to hold her in strict seclusion. The thing be was guarding against now, and while they remained on board, was es-cape or discovery.

It was about the middle of the following afternoon when the Adventurer poked her blunt nose around a point of iand, and came into full view of the squalld hamlet of Yellow Banks. A baif-hour later we lay storgled up against the shore, bolding position amid several other boats made fast to stout trees, busily unloading, and their broad gangplanks stretching from forward deck to bank. The roust-abouts began unloading cargo at once, a steady stream of men, black and white, burdened with whatever load they could snutch up, moving on an encless run across the stiff plank, and on the loss bank to the deler summit. up the low bank to the drier summit, It chanced to be my good fortune to escape this labor, having been detailed by Mapes to drag boxes, bales and barrels forward to where the hurrying bearers could grasp them more read-ity. This brought me close to the forward stairs, down which the departing passengers trooped, threading their insecure way among the trotting laborers, in an effort to get ashore. Reynolds' troops, all militin, and the greater part of them mounted, were an extremely sorry-looking lot--sturdy extremely sorry-looking lot--sturdy enough physically, of the pionest type, but bearing little soldierly apprarance, and utterly ignorant of discipline. The men had chosen officers from out their own ranks by popular election, and these exercised their authority very inrgely through physical prowers.

We had an excellent illustration of A tall, lank, ungainly officer, with a face so distinctly homely as to lustantly attract my attention, led his company of men up the river bank, and ordered them to transport the pile of commissary stores from where they had been promiscuously thrown to a drier spot farther back. The officer was a captain, to judge from certain stripes of red cloth sewed on the shoulders of his brown jean blouse, but his men were far from prompt in obeying his command, evidently having no taste for the job. One among them, apparently their ringlesder in incipient mutiny, an upstanding bully with the law of a prize fighter, took it upon himself openly to defy the officer, exclaiming profanely that he'd be d-d if he ever enlisted to do nigger work. The others langhed, and joined in the revolt, until the captain unceremoniously flour off his blouse, thus divest ing himself of every vestige of rank, and proceeded to enforce his authority. It was a battle royal, the soldiers crowding eagerly about, and Jelling encouragement impartially first to one combatant and then another.

"Kick him in the ribs. Sam!" "Now, Abe, you're got blur-crack the d-n cuss' neck."

"By golly I that's the way we do it in er new—good boy, Abe,"

Will-fer tote them passels?"

The discomitted Jenkins, one of whose eyes was closed, and full of it rested its other end firmly against the bank.

"H-1 yes," he admitted, "I'd sure dutice ter dew it."

The conqueror released his grip, and stood up, revenling his full height, and reaching out for the discarded blonse, quietly slipped it on. One of the Adventurer's passengers, an officer in uniform, going ashore, another tall, spare man had halted on the garg-plank to watch the contest. Now he stepped forward to greet the victor, with smiling eyes and ontstretched

"Not so badly done, captain," he said cordially. "I am Lieut. Jefferson Davis of General Atcheson's staff, and may have a good word to say regard-ing your efficiency some time."

The other wiped his clay-bespattered fugers on his dingy jean pants, and gripped the offered hand.

"Thank ye, sir," he answered good humoredty. "Im Abe Lincoln of Salem, Illinoy, an' I ain't got but just one boys tute this stuff, an' I reckon they're goin' ter do it."

With the exchange of another word or two they parted, and not until thirty years later did I realize what that chance meeting meant, there in the clay mud of Yellow Banks, at the edge of the Indian wilderness, when Abraham Lincoln of Illinois and Jeffer-ion Davis of Mississippi stood in con-radeship with clasped hands.

We had unloaded perhaps a quarter of our supplies, when an officer sudden-ly appeared over the crest of the bank and hailed the captain. There was a lone of authority in his voice which caused us to knock off work and lis-

"Is Captain Corcoran there? I bring orders from headquarters. You are to discontinue unloading, captain, retain the remainder of the provisions on poard and prepare at once to take on

"Take on men? We are not to return

"No; you're going in the other direction—up the Rock. You better get

He wheeled his horse and disappeared, leaving the angry captain venting his displeasure on the vacant air. Kirby, evidently from some posi-tion across the deck, broke in with a sharp question.

"What is that, Corcoran? Did the fellow say you were not going back to St. Lonie?"

"That's just what he said. We've got to nose our way up Rock river, with a lot of those mensiy soldiers aboard. Here you Mapes, stop that milcading, and get steam up—we've got to put in a night of it."

"But," Insisted Kirby in disgust, "I'm not solny no there; aren't there willingly enough and, taking advanwhitingly enough and, theing advan-inge of the confusion on board. I en-leavored to creep up the stairs and gain a view of the upper deck. But both Mapes and the second mate made this attempt impossible, forcing me into the ranks of the others and compelling me to restow the cargo. So far-as I could perceive, no attempt to flepart was made by anyone, excepting a big fellow with a red mustache, who swore profunely as he struggled through the mud, dragging a buge

The situation puzzled and confused me. What choice would Kirby and the deputy make? If once up Rock river the Adventurer might very likely not return for weeks, and it did not seem to me possible that the impatient gambler would consent to such a delay. Every advance northward brought Every with it a new danger of ex-posure. These were Hilnois troops to be transported—not regulars, but militia, gathered from a hundred hamlets—and many among them would be open enemies of slavery. Let such men as these, rough with the pioneer sense of justice, once suspect the situation of those two women, especially if the rumor got abroad among them that Eloise was white, and the slavebunter would have a hard row to hoe. And I made up my mind such a rumor should be sown brondenst; aye, more, that if the necessity arese, I would throw off my own disguise and front him openly with the charge. I could do no more.

It was only an accident which gave me a clue to the real program. Mapes sent me back into the vacant space just forward of the puddle-wheel, seeking a lost canthook, and, as I turned about to return, the missing tool in my hand, I paused a moment to glance curiously out through a slit in the "He's got yer now, Jenkins, he's got of a loud voice uttering a command, or now—good boy, Abe."

boat's plonking, attracted by the sound of a loud voice uttering a command.
I was facing the shore and a body of men, manuformed, slouching along with small regard to order, but each ree, but when the circle of wildly excited men finally broke apart, the big rebel was lying flat on his back in the yellow mud, and the inter-officer was indicating every inclination to press Lim down out of sight.

with small regard to order, but each exciting the across his shoulder, were just tipping the ridge and plow. Ing their way down through the slipper of the most of the forward gangway. Although I saw, not for an instant did my gaze linger on their disordered ranks. apparent. For some reason of his own, Kirby had evidently chosen this means of attaining the shore, and through personal friendship, Corcoran had consented to aid his purpose. The reason, plainly enough, was that by use of this stern gangway the landing party would be enabled to attain the bank without the necessity of pushing their way through the crowd of idle loung-ers forward. And the passage had just been accomplished, for, as my eyes focussed the scene, they recognized the spare figure of the deputy disappearing over the creat—a vague glimpse, but sufficient. At the same instant hands above began to draw in the

There was but one thing for me to do, one action to fake—follow them. Are You Heeding The President's Advice?

Mr. Wilson said in Congress recently:

"-exercise a greater vigilance, a more thoughtful economy, a more discriminating care as to merchants you trade with than you hitherto exercised."

The President gave this as the true rule for reducing the cost of living for each individual who followed it.

There is no denying that lower prices can come only through increased production. Meanwhile, the Wright-Metzler Compan, has put its good name into its merchandise this year as never before and never before has it made such a supreme effort to see that so stocks with inflated values or no unnecessary nierchandise would find their way to the company's shelves.

These are the three "R's" which this store is offering its customers to help reduce their high cost of living.

The Right Hat

Confidence in the correctness of the style and quality of one's hat is essential always. Confidence that the style and quality are RIGHT gives one opportunity to choose then the hat most becoming.

Men who buy Wright-Metzler hats this year will have the assurance that "discriminating care" in the selection of the styles and untiring "vigilance" in the safeguarding of the quality have gone into every hat before it was bought for display and sale

A Derby or a Soft Hat, either will add distinction to your appearance for there is quality—the Wright-Metzler quality—in every one. The prices range from

$3.50 to $12.70

Especially splendid are the values in the 30 styles

MEN'S DRESS WEAR

Durability is "Right" For Boys

Into the average boy's hat must go three qualities-

Alpine and Telescope hats will stand rough treatment style, good value and durability. Most hoys regard a hat as a wardrobe superfluity unless it can be rolled up and stuffed into a convenient pocket when not absolutely neces-splendidly and they are fine for the tootball scrimmagers as well as for the futle fellows. They are priced at as boys is caps, and our showing for the season is complete. The prices are from
